

WallachBeth Capital's David Beth to Speak at 5th Annual "InsideETFs" Conference; Option Market Veteran to Shine Light on Volatility Smoothing in Turbulent Times

For Immediate Release

December 20, New York, NY—WallachBeth Capital LLC ("WB"), the institutional brokerage/execution firm specializing in ETFs and exchange-listed derivatives, announced today that David Beth, President and Chief Operating Officer, will be speaking at the 5th Annual "InsideETFs" Conference taking place January 22-24 at the Westin Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Florida. Mr. Beth's presentation will focus on ETF option strategies that can mitigate risk while enhancing returns for institutional fund managers.

According to Matt Hougan, President of ETF Analytics and Global Head of Editorial for IndexUniverse, the leading independent authority on ETFs and producer of the "Inside ETFs" conference program for professional fund managers, "ETF trading volumes now represent upwards of 30% of major exchange daily activity. Given that overall market volatility remains robust compared to prior periods, there's a clear and present need by managers to better understand how ETF options can both enhance returns and mitigate risk. Having option market veterans such as David Beth participate in our forums and provide easy-to-understand insight helps our constituents leave Inside ETFs armed with the knowledge they need to tackle today's challenging markets and meet their clients' objectives."

Noted David Beth, "Despite the growing number of fund managers who regularly employ option strategies, wider use of these products by many other managers remains elusive, often because there still remain too many misconceptions about option products in general. The fact is, today's investment environment presents unheralded uncertainties, and I believe that any fiduciary who is not fully informed about the ways ETF options can both augment returns as well as provide cost-efficient protection is doing a disservice to themselves and their clients."
